What heroes do when disaster strikes

Merv Bishop Cherokee County Administrator

"That was a very long week, the time that time stood still. Opening up our EOC with all the different departments: sheriff, roads and bridges, DOT, school district. The people that I had in that room were fantastic. I wouldn't go to battle with any other people."

David Garner Abbeville County Director

"I'm incredibly proud and honored to have been part of this community during this response. No one shied away from what needed to be done. Every single responder went above and beyond. I really felt like there was nothing we couldn't accomplish."

Ken Roper Pickens County Administrator

"One of the things about being part of Appalachia, it's self reliant. The good neighbors, the good people, hardscrabble folks. They're willing to address their problems. You give us any kind of tool, and we'll fix that problem. It's very heartening to watch that happen."

When disasters strike, emergency management teams rise up, suit up, buckle up and head straight into the heart of the storm to protect and serve their neighbors and communities. We're honored to stand behind these South Carolina Heroes and document their personal stories of teamwork, dedication and courage. Visit SouthCarolinaHeroes.com to see and hear from county administrators, law enforcement, firefighters, EMS teams, 911 directors and more. During emergencies and every day, they deserve our respect, gratitude and support.
